The presenter

Leslie Workmon, B. Psych, has specialised in autistic spectrum disorders for the last 14 years. She migrated from the United States to Australia in 1997, after completing her training in psychology with special emphasis in behaviour analysis.

Leslie previously worked as a Behaviour Analyst for an international private clinic for children with ASD, prior to starting her own private clinic in Australia in 1998. Leslie currently is the Clinical Director of ABAQ, a private clinic, specialising in intensive early behavioural and educational intervention for young children with special needs.

She has extensive experience in collaborating with parents, teaching assistants, teachers, school personnel and a variety of allied health professionals to foster growth and positive learning experiences in children with special needs.

Today, she spends her time supervising in-home and school-based programs in Australia and lecturing and training people on the ABA approach to early intervention for young children with ASD. She is committed to improving the lives of families and children living with special needs.
